to go through a fortune than it is to find a way to tie things up to prevent such action. We can write insurance so that we take the responsibility of distribution. Sometimes the cold, legal and just action of an incorporated trustee is more to the advantage of a family than the affectionate but ill-advised impulse of uncles, aunts or sisters, or interested or uninterested suggestions of surviving friends. Also the Annuity idea has a bearing herewith. 55th year, doing business in 38 states.

THE EAST AND WEST.

Balance of Power in Politics and Commerce.

THE TWO SECTIONS COMPARED.

Gain of the Transmississippi States in Political Power and Their Growth in Industrial Influence. Balance of the Two Great Geographical Sections and Its Meaning.

There are twenty states and four territories west of the Mississippi river, not including Alaska and Hawaii. They contain 65 per cent of our area on this continent, says the World's Work for September. This area holds 32 per cent of our population, whose representatives cast 45 per cent of the votes in the senate and 30 per cent of the votes in the house. It has 50 per cent of the property value of all the states as assessed for taxation.

Eighteen per cent of the capital invested in home manufactures is within this territory, and it produces in value 20 per cent of the manufactured products of the whole country. In addition to this the west produces 47 per cent of the total agricultural products of the United States from farms representing 57 per cent of the total farm values.

Growth has been so rapid that in two decades it has caused the center of population to move from Ohio to Indiana, the center of farm values from eastern Indiana to Western Illinois and the center of farming area from eastern Illinois to central Missouri. Twenty years ago the center of the manufacturing industry was in western Pennsylvania. Today it is in central Ohio. The center of the farm income of the United States now rests on the Mississippi river, and while land values have declined in New England they have increased by more than 100 per cent in the west.

Politically the west has always had an influence disproportionate to its population, because every state has two senators and a member of the house regardless of population. Notwithstanding this overrepresentation to start with the growth of the political power of the west has been very rapid. In 1880, when the senate had but seventy-six members, the west cast 34 per cent of the total votes. At the present time, when the senate has ninety members, the west has 45 per cent of the votes. No new senators can be added from the eastern states. Should the territories become states, as they will in the natural order of events, the west will have practically as large a senatorial vote as the east.

In the house the situation is different, for the population governs representation. The gain of western power in the house seems slow, but it is far from being a negligible quantity. In 1880 of the 325 members of the house 24 per cent were from the west. In the present house, with its 386 members, the west has 30 per cent. The east is making great strides in population, and for many years to come, possibly for all time, the east will retain control of the house. But the control of the senate by the west is probably a mere matter of time.

With only 32 per cent of the population the west may therefore be said to hold today an equal division of political power with the east. The west practically controls the senate; the east controls the house. No harm has come to the east from this division of political power with the west, but much good. National politics has been broadened thereby, and conservatism has been leavened with energy until national policies present a healthy and vigorous character.

The growth of the west has hitherto been based chiefly upon mining, agriculture and stock raising. The output of minerals was never greater than it is now, nor were prospects ever surer that it will increase. The agricultural product of the west is half the product of the whole country, and the east looks to it to supply the food deficiencies of a future time when denser population will demand the products from a greater area. Even now the west supplies the great surplus of food-stuffs which enter into foreign trade and constitute the bulk of American exports. Colorado leads in the production of minerals, yet her farms now produce an even greater total of values than her mines. Twenty years ago irrigation was inconsiderable; today 8,000, 600 acres of land are supplied with water.

The stock growing of the west of twenty years ago is becoming the stock farming of the more closely settled country. The eastern states have more live stock to the square mile than the states of the west. The west is giving up the range industry for the more profitable and more scientific stock farm.

Thus the balances measuring the power of the east and west are slowly but surely reaching an equilibrium. They are practically equal politically. It will not be long before they approach equality industrially and commercially as well.

WOMAN'S SYMPATHY.

Is Proverbial—The Barre Women Are No Exception.

How much we owe to the sympathetic side of womanhood! When others suffer they cheerfully lend a helping hand. They tell you the means which brought relief to them that you may profit by their experience. Read the testimony by this woman.

Mrs. C. H. White of 35 West Street says: "Not constantly but far too often to be pleasant, for a number of years I had severe attacks of backache. It was sometimes difficult to get down and just as hard to rise, and despite the fact that I exhausted all my knowledge of simple household remedies all the results I ever obtained were merely temporary. I was in pretty bad shape for some time, suffering both day and night, when I was induced to go to M. A. Brown's drug store for a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I knew after a dose or two that they were working directly upon the kidneys, and as I continued the treatment relief became more positive. When I finished it that particular attack disappeared. I found Doan's Kidney Pills so effective a remedy for kidney complaint that I am certain that any person annoyed with backache or any of the incident ills which follow in the wake of either weakened or over-taxed kidneys will find relief if not positive cure, if they take a course of the treatment."

Sold for 50 cents by all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.
